

Square 1 Utilities ensures that you will benefit from the best and most cost effective energy solution available, whilst also saving costs across their utility bills through energy and water management.

P272 ARE YOU AFFECTED?

P272 is a legislative change, implemented by OFGEM, that requires all maximum demand non half hourly (NHH) meters of profile class 05-08, fitted with an AMR meter, to be settled on actual half hourly data, which is how half hourly meters (HH) are currently settled.

Half hourly meters (HH) provide you with a reading of your energy usage every half an hour, with gives your client a better understanding of where their energy is peaking and if there are any possibilities to become more energy efficient.

The changes will take effect from 1st April 2017 and will avoid suppliers having to use a pre-determined forecast, where actual half hourly data will provide a more accurate view and will allow for improved billing and a true reflection of actual energy costs for the client.

The change is industry wide and will see suppliers reacting at different stages to offer solutions to clients whose current contracts straddle the implementation date. It is still a slight grey area as to what suppliers will do if your contract does straddle the implementation date, with different suppliers releasing different amounts of information on the new legislation.

If your client has a meter that is profile class 05-08 and AMR is fitted, they will be affected. Using supply number, as detailed below, the two highlighted digits denote the profile class. This can be found on the supplier invoice.
